Partnerships with local businesses are just one idea that will be looked at to generate new revenue for the Vernon School District.

Board chair Robert Lee says a new revenue generation/service efficiency review committee is being formed to explore the possibilities of funding sources outside of what they get from the province.

“What we have found over the years is simply, at the end of the day, the pie gets smaller and we’re asked to do more with less. So the intent of this new committee is how do we maximize our efficiencies? Are there ways we can partner with our community and with our businesses to find resources in e different ways that we can bring revenue into our school system that is outside of what Victoria gives us?” Lee tells Beach Radio News.

The board has approved terms of reference for the new committee, which will have until December to deliver a final report.

Lee says finding new revenue streams will leave them less reliant on Victoria, and make the system better for students.

“We have invited members of the general public, members of our regional district, local communities, and from the business community (Chamber of Commerce) as well to explore ideas with them,” adds Lee.

About ten members would sit on the committee who will report to the board on a regular basis.
